DETAILED ACTION

Applicant's response and Guehenneux's and Mehtali's declaration filed on 04/30/08 has been acknowledged and fully considered.

Claims 58, 61, 66, 68-69, 71 and 73-76 are pending and are examined in this office action.

The text of those sections of Title 35, U.S. Code not included in this action can be found in a prior Office action. Rejections and/or objections not reiterated from previous office actions are hereby withdrawn. The references cited herein are of record in a prior Office action.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

Claims 58, 61, 66, 68-69, 71 and 73-76 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the enablement requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to enable one skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and/or use the invention, for the reason of record as set forth in the office action mailed on 10/30/07.

RESPONSE TO ARGUMENT (ENABLEMENT)

In view of Guehenneux's and Mehtali's declaration filed on 04/30/08, the applicant argues that applicants have shown that the present methods can be used to produce non adherent chicken embryonic stem cell lines capable of proliferating in a basal medium in the absence of exogenous trophic factors and cytokines. However the applicant's arguments are found not fully persuasive because at best the Guehenneux's and Mehtali's declaration demonstrated the making of a cell line derived from a non adherent chicken embryonic stem cells which is capable of proliferating in the absence of exogenous trophic factors and cytokines.

The Mehtali's declaration states that "The ultimate proof of the ES status of cultured avian cells is the demonstration of the totipotency of such cells. To do so, the inventors have realized an experiment to evaluate the ability of chicken ES cells maintained during more than 2 weeks into culture to contribute to in vivo reconstruction of a chicken embryo (See Appendix N°I). Thus the inventors demonstrate the germ-line transmission of cultured chicken ES cells according to the process of the invention." see page 4-5 and Appendix-1).

However the declaration(s) fall short of providing any evidence that demonstrates the germ-line transmission of cultured chicken ES cells produced by the method as claimed herein. The applicant fails to establish that the cell lines (obtained via method as claimed and in the declarations submitted) are indeed the embryonic stem cells which are capable of eliciting the embryonic stem cells characteristics (i.e. unique capacity of contributing to the morphogenesis of an embryo and of participating in germline colonization when they are re-implanted in a recipient embryo).

At best the declarations demonstrates the making of a chicken cell line (EBx) derived from non adherent chicken embryonic stem cells which do not present any staining for EMA1 (2%) and a very light one for SSEA-1(22%) (see Mehtali's declaration page 28, Sec 5.1.2). Thus considering the state of the art and limited amount of guidance provided by the applicant is it considered highly unpredictable that one skilled in the art would be able to practice the invention as claimed without further undue amount of experimentation, which would requires phenotypic and functional characterization of any cell line obtained as an embryonic stem cell.

Furthermore, It is noted that patent protection is granted in return for an enabling disclosure of an invention, not for vague intimations of general ideas that may or may not be workable (See Brenner v. Manson, 383 U.S. 519, 536, 148 USPQ 689, 696 (1966), Stating, in context of the utility requirement, that "a patent is not a hunting license. It is not a reward for the search, but compensation for its successful conclusion.") Tossing out the mere germ of an idea does not constitute enabling disclosure. While every aspect of a generic claim certainly need not have been carried out by an inventor, or exemplified in the specification, reasonable detail must be provided in order to enable members of the public to understand and carry out the invention.

In instant case making a non-adherent chicken embryonic stem cell line as claimed herein is not considered routine in the art and without sufficient enabled disclosure, the experimentation left to those skilled in the art is unnecessarily, and improperly, extensive and undue. See In re Wands 858 F.2d 731, 8 USPQ2d 1400 (Fed. Cir, 1988). It is noted that the unpredictability of a particular area may alone provide reasonable doubt as to the accuracy of the broad statement made in support of enablement of claims. See Ex parte Singh, 17 USPQ2d 1714 (BPAI 1991). Therefore considering the state of the art and limited amount of guidance provided in the instant specification, one skill in the art would have to engage in excessive and undue amount of experimentation to exercise the invention as claimed.

Conclusion

No claims are allowed.

Applicant's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
